I must now bid you farewell. As many hon. Members have stated, I am sure that there will be opportunities for us to meet though not in this Assembly but in other spheres of work, in other institutions. For, we are not here separating altogether, detaching ourselves one from another. But, for the time being, we are separating ourselves from this particular sphere of work. In India, so much work has to be done and we are all inspired with the feeling that we are Indians. There is only a common citizenship for India. There is no separate citizenship for Madras, or for Kerala or for Andhra. We are all citizens of one great country, viz., India. Wherever our lot may be cast, I am sure we will all pull together and we will always have the feeling that we are one. The experience gained here in the Madras Legislative Assembly and the great associations that we have had with many of you and your friendly feelings towards us will all inspire us to do much greater things. Let me wish you all happiness. Let me also wish that this Madras Legislative Assembly will become and remain a model Parliament for all other States. Thank you all very much. (Applause.)

1-40 p.m. I now adjourn the House sine die.

The House then adjourned sine die.
